Naomi: Have you ever heard that people will live in houses under the sea in the future?

Mike: I've never heard about that, but it sounds very exciting! If I live there, I can enjoy watching a lot of fish through the windows at home every day! Naomi, why did you ask me that question?

Naomi: Well, we learned about one American writer named Isaac Asimov in class last week. In 1964, he wrote a report about the future. He thought how people's lives would be after 50 years. He wrote a lot of ideas about the future, but one of them was that people would live under the sea.

Mike: The future year he meant was 2014, right? Now we live in 2021, and we still don't live under the sea. That idea has not become true yet. Well, do you know why Isaac Asimov thought that people would live under the sea?

Naomi: He thought that there would be too many people on the Earth in the future, and there would not be so many places on the land for all of us. So, he thought that some of us would start to build our houses under the sea.

Mike: I see.... The sea can give us more places to build our houses than the land.

Naomi: But, if we really live under the sea in the future, how will we work? Will we work on the land or under the sea? I think the way of working will also change in the future. I have heard about John Maynard Keynes in class. In 1930, he said that people would work for only three hours each day after 100 years.

Mike: Only three hours in 2030? Why did he think so?

Naomi: He thought that we would get everything that we wanted and we would not need so much money. So, he thought that people in the future would not need to work so hard.

Mike: Wow, if that really happens, I will work only in the morning. Then, in the afternoon, I will meet my friends, eat lunch together, and enjoy shopping and so on! I hope that Keynes's idea will become true.

Naomi: Um, well, it's already 2021. Do you think that the world will change in that way after ten years? My older brother Satoshi still works hard every day. He can come home at about 6 p.m., but he usually brings a lot of work with him. He always uses his computer at home to finish his work. He is very tired, so he cannot play his favorite sport tennis on weekends.

Mike: I am sorry to hear that. Why does your brother work so hard?

Naomi: He likes his job because he feels that his job helps many people. Also, he often says that he needs money to travel to the moon in the future.

Mike: Wow, he has a big dream.

Naomi: That's right. Working hard is important for him, so I don't think that Keynes's idea will become true in 2030. Maybe, Keynes didn't think that we would want more things even after we could get the things we wanted. We need to work hard to do and get newer and better things.

Mike: I think that we should not work only for money. I would like to know a good way of life and the meaning of working hard. Do we really need so many things?

Naomi: That is a difficult question. We are still students, and we have much time to think about it. Let's study hard, learn many things, and choose the best way to live.

Question 1: What can Mike enjoy if he lives under the sea?

Question 2: What year did Isaac Asimov write about in his report?

Question 3: Why did Isaac Asimov think that people would live under the sea in the future?

Question 4: Why did John Maynard Keynes think that we would work for only three hours each day in the future?

Question 5: Why is Satoshi tired every day?

Question 6: What is Satoshi's dream?

Question 7: What does Mike want to know from now?
